Republican Arrangements

Washington, D. C., February 10.—The sub-committee of the Republican national committee having charge of the arrangements for the convention met at the office of Chairman Clarkson this afternoon. The Grand Opera House in this city was inspected by the sub-committee, and at the conclusion of the inspection it was unanimously decided that the auditorium would be ready for the convention. The Chicago delegation has applied for tickets for local use, and Mr. Clarkson said they would be [illegible]. There is a feeling here that the [illegible] should be as large as possible, and so many applications for tickets have been received that it probably will be necessary to issue [illegible] days in advance of the convention. Mr. Clarkson said he had already received [illegible] applications for tickets [illegible]. The committee, consisting of Messrs. Clarkson, [illegible] and Carter, will constitute a sub-committee, of which Mr. Carter will be chairman, and will have charge of arrangements, and will meet here whenever he thinks they should. The full committee will probably not meet here until Wednesday preceding the convention.

Talk in Rhode Island.

Providence, R. I., February 10.—The Young Men's Republican club were addressed this evening by John Sherman, Governor Ladder of Connecticut, Senator Sherman, Congressman Hitt and others. Mr. Sherman's address was devoted to the discussion of the presidential campaign [illegible] the approaching campaign would be a contest of the day upon the record of the administration [illegible] the issue of the campaign to be the tariff, upon which issue, he said the democratic party was [illegible] the tariff off of wool [illegible] reduction in the duties of sugar, for the reason [illegible] was grown in the south. He [illegible] the tariff off of sugar and the duties on [illegible]. He then [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] of the [illegible] of THREE ADDRESSES.

Three notable addresses were delivered in Europe this week. The first was by Bismarck on Tuesday, the second by Castelar on Wednesday, and the third by Queen Victoria on Thursday. In one the queen of the proudest and richest kingdom in Europe addressed her subjects in a carefully prepared speech. This speech has been read by few and is now practically forgotten. It has no influence and could not excite even local interest. Another address was by the patriot statesman of Spain announcing his withdrawal from public life. It was suggestive of Washington's farewell address in its temper and disinterested advice. The founder and, for many years, leader of the liberal movement in Spain told his friends that a monarchy that brought forward and enacted liberal legislation, deserved their support and confidence. It was the address of a statesman and a patriot, and profoundly stirred the representatives of all parties in the Cortes. But this speech, though touching on continental affairs, will exert no positive influence outside of Spain. The third speech was perhaps the most remarkable address delivered in many years, considering the man who delivered it and the influence it had. On Sunday morning all the dispatches indicated a general European war. The word of one man dispelled the clouds and gave instant and general confidence throughout the entire world that there would be peace. A comparison of the speech of Bismarck with that of Castelar would show the latter far more scholarly, eloquent and even statesmanlike. He outlines a policy of disarmament which must finally prevail. Where then is his power? It is in himself and the character of the people behind him. The people of Germany are the most thoroughly united and loyal people in Europe. Every subject that affects the nation at large stirs a profound and masterful national spirit that overrides all domestic differences or party prejudice. When this national spirit is thoroughly awakened there is only one man in Germany and that is Bismarck. Since the organization of the empire Germany has been largely occupied with domestic questions. During this, fifteen or more years Bismarck has often had bitter contests and has many times just escaped humiliating defeats. More than once he has placed his portfolio in the hands of the emperor. This is almost the first time that a thoroughly national question has stirred German patriotism since the war with France. Yet Bismarck when he spoke the other day had not only the ear but the heart of the whole German people. They had confidence in his judgment and patriotism. It is almost twenty six years ago since Bismarck, just placed at the head of the ministry was refused the military budget that he deemed necessary. He then defiantly said it is not by speeches and majority votes that the great questions of the times would be settled but by iron and blood, and immediately spent the money without the appropriation. Threats of impeachment did not frighten him. They then became acquainted with the man and call him the man of "Iron and blood." The events of the subsequent nine years convinced the people that Bismarck was dogmatic and autocratic from his intense patriotism, that the preservation of the national possessions and honor was dearer to him than everything else and that he would protect them with or without the support of the deputies. The present magnificent empire of Germany, built up step by step by the wisdom and energy of Bismarck, is the ground of their confidence in his judgment. It is only a few months ago that the reichstag refused absolutely to vote the money asked for by Bismarck for the army, and was dissolved. But the appeal on Tuesday to the patriotism of the members carried the bill through with a whirl. Bismarck has had no greater triumph than this speech, not because of its effect at home, but in Europe. Unconvinced she will learn to be the greatest and most powerful ruler in Europe. Napoleon since Napoleon has spoken with such authority. He must determine how soon war like. It is a fitting crown to his sixty years service to his country, that the last utterance should be a successful plea for honorable peace.

STATE NEWS.

La Junta is agitating the question of sewerage.

Farmers were plowing sod sowing wheat in the San Luis valley on February 1st.

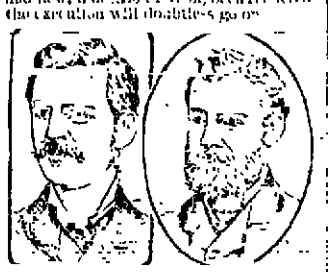
Where it does healthy people live that such a condition of affairs exists? It is a fact that fourteen deaths occurred over on the Leadville Divide in one week last month. Of these $20 per acre pays in crops. If the wet from 250 to 300 per acre per annum. In the east we see Wheat to 75 cents and upwards per acre and our farmer with 12 per cent. Oh, cows, cows where your milk pail not to be seen.

MAXWELL MUST HANG.

Portraits of Him and His Victim — Much of the Crime.

The supreme court of the United States has decided adversely in the case of Hugh M. Brooke, alias W. H. Maxwell, who was wanted in the state court of Missouri for the murder of Preller.

For nearly three years this case has excited a good deal of interest. It dragged along from the state courts. Maxwell was found guilty and sentenced. His case was appealed to the highest tribunal, and now, it is said, having been decided the execution will doubtless go on.

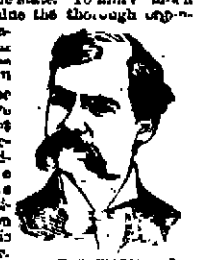


It will be remembered that on the morning of April 14, 1885, a suspicious looking trunk, found at the Southern Hotel, at St. Louis, the property of a man who had registered under the name of W. H. L. Maxwell, M. D., was opened by a trunk dealer who had been called in for the purpose. The body of a man was found jammed into it. The police were notified, the case was taken in hand and the body found to be that of Maxwell's companion, who registered as C. A. Preller, of London, England. Maxwell was traced to San Francisco and had gone to New Zealand. Extradition papers were forwarded, and a telegram sent to arrest him on arrival. He was missed from sleep on the vessel, on the morning it came into port, and arrested. He was taken to St. Louis, where his trial was begun on the 12th of May, 1886, and a verdict rendered on the 31st of the following June. His defence was that he had killed Preller accidentally while treating the latter professionally. An appeal was taken to the state supreme court, where the case was affirmed. From there the case was taken to the United States supreme court.

HENRY C. WARMOUTH.

Named by the Republicans of Louisiana for Governor of the State.

Henry C. Warmouth, named for governor by the Republicans of Louisiana, was governor during one of the stormiest periods of the state's history. Since the political revolution of 1876-77 Gov. Warmouth has resided on his magnificent plantation, the Magnolia, which fronts on the Mississippi below New Orleans. But though out of politics he has not been idle. His activity and energy in all that concerns the development of the state has been phenomenal. His place is a model for sugar plantations, and in his management of labor, stock and machinery he has introduced methods of decided value to the state. To him as much as any man is due the thorough organization of free labor on the sugar plantation (the plan above all others in the south where slave labor was thought a necessity on account of the exigencies of the crop); he has proved by practical demonstration that free labor is more profitable, and the quick-witted Creoles have recognized the lesson of his example.



HENRY C. WARMOUTH.

Henry C. Warmouth was born in Illinois in 1842, enlisted in the army at an early age, and soon became colonel of a Missouri regiment. At the close of the war found him in New Orleans, and he at once proceeded to organize the colored people into political clubs through the medium of their churches. By his skill and address the colored men of almost every church in the city were organized into clubs for the promotion of political inquiry, and they sent him, in 1867, to present their case before the congressional committee. In 1868, at the age of 26, he was elected governor, and was succeeded in 1872 by William P. Kellogg. When the divisions arose in the party in Louisiana he retired to his plantation, where he has succeeded in getting rich and making a great reputation as a model planter.

A New Air Ship.

The practical navigation of the air and perpetual motion, are ever present unsolved problems, which continually occupy the brains of inventors and dreamers. Now comes one Peter C. Cooper, a watch maker of Brooklyn, who has built a balloon shape and driven it through the air in any direction in which it is started. On the first experiment, thirty years.

The floating power is an egg shaped balloon—in the case of the model now in working order at the rate of five feet, 60 by 30 inches of oiled silk three layers. It has a keel of steel, the lower curved which is held straight by a stick of wood. At the stern is a rudder and three propellers, each 3 feet in diameter, and by a bow a rudder of silk. The electric engine, which furnishes power for the propeller is contained in a wicker basket. On the side are silk wings, something in appearance like the wings of a bat and capable of being set to almost any slant.

COOPER'S AIR SHIP.

At a recent exhibition of the model the Aeronautical Society of Brooklyn Mr. Cooper's machine attained a speed of three miles an hour. Encouraged by this success he will construct a machine of sufficient power to carry a number of passengers. Each of the propellers will require 1/2 horse power, which will be furnished by a storage battery weighing 150 pounds. The total weight of the machine will be 1,000 pounds.

Parnell's Amendment.

LONDON, February 10.—The bill of Parnell's land purchase amendment was defeated. Mr. Parnell's amendment was to the effect that the land purchase bill should not be passed until the land question was settled. The amendment was defeated by a vote of 281 to 244.

Champion Sculling.

TORONTO, February 10.—A match for the championship of Canada and $500 a side was rowed to-day between Ned Hanlan, champion of the world, and Wallace Ross, champion of Canada. The course was from the Queen's Hotel to the Island and return, a distance of three miles. Hanlan won by about 200 yards. Time, 20:30.

John L. Sullivan has agreed to meet Jack Knight in a stand before but for 200 pounds a side.
